“As a partnership between community groups, government agencies advocacy organizations, law enforcement and faith based organizations, the Coalition Against Hate Violence serves as an important forum to share intelligence, strategy and community resources.” - Theresa Sparks

I. Introduction

San Francisco has a long proud reputation for being a welcoming and diverse city. With this reputation comes the responsibility to recognize the tension between first amendment rights and everyone's right to human dignity. In the fight to end discrimination and bias motivated violence, Bay Area organizations and residents must continue to collaborate and create an environment that encourages community and fosters education.

This guide is a reflection of the hard work being done around the Bay Area to combat respond to and prevent hate violence. For years, the organizations listed on these pages have opened their doors, provided support and valuable resources to victims of hate violence and residents seeking to expel extremist acts from their communities.

Moreover, under the leadership of Mayor Ed Lee District Attorney George Gascon, and Human Rights Commission Director Theresa Sparks the City has prosecuted offenders and organized programming directed at creating sustainable solutions to deter hate based violence. This directory exemplifies the City leadership's commitment to ensuring that hate violence victims and witness are aware of the strong support network in San Francisco and obtain appropriate services.

II. About the Coalition Against Hate Violence

The Human Rights Commission staffs the San Francisco Coalition Against Hate Violence, which is comprised of over 20 agencies representing a broad array of nongovernmental organizations, government agencies, law enforcement agencies, service providers, educators, and community members, all of whom are committed to ending hate incidents and hate crimes in San Francisco. The Coalition meets quarterly to share information, allow for networking opportunities among members and to develop educational programs and outreach opportunities to combat hate incidents and hate crime.

III. About this Directory

The Directory of Services for Victims and Witnesses of Hate Crimes, 2012 represents an important tool for community members, City departments, criminal justice agencies, and community-based service providers, offering the means to make accurate and effective referrals to survivors.

The Directory focuses on services provided specifically for victims of hate violence and persons seeking resources to end hate violence in their communities. Local agencies engaging in advocacy, policy reform, and technical assistance have also been included, as have local and regional coalitions against hate violence

Although every effort has been made to include as many organizations that respond to hate violence, programs in the community frequently change, and alterations are expected in future editions.

Please contact the Human Rights Commission with any modifications, additions, or deletions to the services listed by sending an email to zoe.polk@sfgov.org or by calling (415) 252-2500.
